

Fairfield Resident Named to Board of Housatonic Community College Foundation

Paul Antinozzi, president of the Housatonic Community College Foundation, has announced that the Foundation Board has added a new member, who is also a Fairfield resident.

G. Frederick Reinhardt is President of The Bank of Fairfield, a two-branch community bank that opened in 2008. Previously he was a director at Merrill Lynch Bank USA. Reinhardt is Chairman of the Board of Foreign Parishes of the Episcopal Church and is fluent in French and Italian. He holds an AB in Political Science from Kenyon College.

About the Housatonic Community College Foundation

The Housatonic Community College Foundation was formed in 1990 to assist the College and its students beyond the fundamentals provided by the state. The Foundation provides resources for scholarships, equipment, program enhancements, community outreach and support for the Housatonic Museum of Art. The college opened in 1967 with 378 students. The current enrollment is over 5,600 students housed in two state-of-the-art buildings at 900 Lafayette Blvd.

As Fairfield's only hometown bank, The Bank of Fairfield is a locally managed commercial bank committed to providing the highest possible level of customer service and added value to the community. Located at 2150 Post Road and 2248 Black Rock Turnpike, the Bank offers a full range of banking and lending services.
